Dear Mr. or Ms. Reader,

I'm writing this letter to support my application for your "Junior Programmer" position, which I found on the Concordia Student Success Center website. I'm a 3rd year undergraduate student in Computer Science, Concordia University, with one year of web development experience. Currently I'm looking for a full-time position as a web-developer or related position for the summer 2017 and work in your company would greatly benefit me. If you would be satisfied with my achievements I'm interested in continuation of my employment during studies period.

I'm capable of working on a variety of development tasks. In my previous employments and projects I've been mostly working on web-development tasks of different scale: from creation landing web pages with HTML/CSS/JS, to designing and programming web portals from scratch. In my current work I've been creating ASP.NET web site and it's views, design MSSQL database. I also had significant experience in programming with usage of C++ and Java during my first education, I'm a quickly learning new technologies and tools with accordance to my client/employer needs.

My current employment gave me solid experience in self management process. In the past, I only had experience in work on small tasks, not requiring much planning. In current work, I've obtained experience in self organizing, planning and leading of large-scale project. These skills should greatly benefit my employer. I will maintain high efficiency and follow work requirements, seeking for simpler solutions for given tasks.

As important as my technical qualifications, I believe I possess team skills that will enhance my contribution to your organization's success. Of course, my aim is to continue learning in both technical and interpersonal arenas. An opportunity to do so with your organization is especially appealing to me.

If my application has interested you, I would like to meet with you for further discussion of my candidacy. You can find more information on my background and experience in the attached resume. You may contact me through khomich.art@gmail.com or by telephone on 438-838-3214 phone number. I'm looking forward to hear from you. I'm able to start work at 8th of May.

Sincerely,
Artem Khomich
